Others From Arizona and New Mexico Named In Big Tuesday List.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—Practically complete reports of deaths in action among the expeditionary forces should reach the war department by December 20, and of the severely wounded by December 27. Gen. Pershing cabled the department Monday.

Gen. Pershing said that the number of unreported casualties in process of verification at the central records office of the expeditionary forces, on December 14, was 40,440.

They were divided as follows: Killed in action, 239. Died of disease, 218. Accidentally killed, 57.

Severely wounded in action, 23,371. These included all "suspense cases" under investigation, the general said.

In "Wild Cat Division," total casualties in November 23, in the 48th (Wild Cat) Division (North Carolina, South Carolina and Tennessee national guard) were given as follows: The casualties were classified as follows:

Killed in action, 1163. Died of wounds, 253. Died of disease, 218. Accidentally killed, 57.

Severely wounded, 1181. Wounded, degrees undetermined, 819. Slightly wounded, 3871. Missing or captured, 192.

Gen. Pershing reported that the number of duplicated casualties reported in the central records office since November 27, would not operate to reduce the total for the entire expeditionary forces.

Gen. Pershing said that, of that date, as additional casualties reported more than offset the duplicates.

The report today from the American commander was in reply to specific questions asked by the war department. In asking regarding the casualties in the 20th division, the department said there had been much apprehension here about the losses of this unit, which helped the British break the famous Hindenburg line.

U-Boats Taken Over By Crews Who Fought 'em

Boasted Innovations In Machinery Easily Mastered By British Sailors.

Harwich, Eng., Dec. 17.—(By Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The business of actually accepting the German submarines in surrender was performed by officers and men of the British submarine force, who for more than four years had maintained a tedious but relentless vigil of waters of the British Isles. An admiralty in a light cruiser commanded the fleet to which the U-boats surrendered that it was a submarine officer who first stepped aboard each submarine, curtly went through with the brief formalities and it was a crew of men who had fought the U-boats by underwater methods that manned it and took it to port.

These men, who had been struggling stuck to a job that was recognized by the admiralty as one of the most important in the navy but was not valued by participation in an event unique in naval history and a fitting ending for service performed.

Although British submarines always were on the lookout for U-boats, the British submarine force was measured by the number they destroyed. Nevertheless it was considered that the U-boats were being sunk by British submarines during the war and it was the same number of U-boats that had been taken over by British sailors.

So much had been said of the intricate business of accepting the U-boats that there were many inquiries among the British officers of their ability to navigate them soon after they had received them. They were soon reassured, however, as nothing so far different from other U-boats was found. Among the first 27 brought in was the U-17, which is 27 feet long and carried three months ago and had never been to sea until she crossed the British channel to be surrendered.

Washington, D. C., Dec. 17.—(By Correspondence of The Associated Press.)—The passage of the war revenue bill was urged in the senate today by senator Penrose, of Pennsylvania, senior Republican member of the finance committee.

Senator Penrose gave his views when the senate reached the income tax section, which provides for reduction of rates in 1920. Chairman Simmons, of the finance committee, had formally announced that every effort would be made to reach a final vote on the measure before the holidays.

Senator Simmons, of Utah, Republican, had delivered a prepared address, criticizing the war revenue bill, the senate Monday began consideration of disputed sections of the measure. On the first roll call taken on the bill, the senate voted 24 to 16 to retain the finance committee's amendment, providing for refund of taxes to those who demonstrate to the treasury department that in previous years they have suffered a net loss in their business.
